

Dear Colleagues,

we are pleased to invite you for the second edition of Translaton conference, which will become a part of a cycle of translation-studies conferences, devoted to a wide spectrum of issues connected with translation.

This year's conference will take place on 23.09–24.09.2021 online. The conference theme is: The Present and Future of Translation Studies – Current Trends and New Directions.

The organisers of the conference cycle have always intended to create a platform integrating various, often contrasting, but invariably complementing each other scientific perspectives on translation reality, different research methodologies, research equipment applications, as well as provide the possibility of exchanging information concerning practical aspects of the professional activity in translation and interpreting. All this allows to stimulate the translation-studies discourse and broaden its scope and consequently develop not only translation studies themselves, but also the conceptual basis for translation training, competence models and outlining methodological proposals.

Please submit your conference talks topics within the following research areas:

- Translation studies – the present and future
- Empirical research in translation studies
- Translation and interpreting – the variety of views and paradigms
- Audiovisual translation (AVT)
- Intersemiotic and intermedial translation
- Plain language as intralinguistic translation
- Translation training and didactics
- Translation quality, translation praxeology
- New technologies in translation studies
- Translation market and translation practices
- Literary translation and translating LSP texts
- Neurobiological and psychological aspects of translation processes.

Publishing conference papers as articles in a peer-reviewed scientific journal will be possible for willing participants.
